

National Public Radio Broadcast: The Malvo Sniper Case and Juvenile Justice

National Public Radio
Nov. 10, 2003

NPR's Madeleine Brand talks with Nola Folsten, a Kansas state district attorney, and Steven Harper, a professor of juvenile justice at the University of Miami Law School, about whether juveniles get adequate legal representation in cases similar to that of 18-year-old sniper suspect Lee Malvo. The conversation stems from the findings of the six assessments released in October 2003.

<http://www.npr.org/templates/story/story.php?storyId=1499851>